Hartford. June 15.—The proponents and the antagonists of a bill for the control of public utilities in the state by a commission had their final struggle this afterneon at the end of the house hearing before the special committee for the consideration of that measure and the most telling and pertinent arguments were advanced. Those in favor of the passage of such a law emphasized most strongly the argument that capitalization of corporations should be subject to the most strict regulation as well as the rates charged by them. The antagonists of the bill brought to bear the argument that while the commissioners chosen under present conditions might be good, conscientious men, that as time passed there would be others not so conscientious who would, with the power and patronne given them, hold up a powerful political machine and make Connecticut another of the sistes which are controlled by one-finan bosses and that no real reason is adduced by the supporters of the measure which would warrant the expensive which will reappoint him on the committee? Then with him on the committee? Then with who will work with harmony with him on the committee? Then with $200,000 to distribute through the towns of the state to 'experts,' what would be the result?"

He thought that the present move was only a procedure of one to result.

The hearing was opened by Raiph O. Wells, who was as secretary of the public service commission, most at tive in drafting the measure which is now before the legislature. Mr. Wells told of the effects of overcapitalization and showed that it keeps the public from knowing whether it is getting its money's worth from the corporations or not. He then took up a procedure of one to regulate in the same way the industrial corporations, as nine-tenths of the bill apply as well to them as they do to public service corporations. He thought the bill would work untold mischief. He replied to Mr. Wells' remarks concerning the capitalization of the New Haven road and said that abuses in electric light and gas com-

Mr. Hyde spoke along the lines of the state attorney will investigate the enact regulating measures itself and not delegate the power to a commis-sion and leaving no way to correct abuses except through a discharge of the commission. He stat-ed that all the examples of evil from ver-capitalization come from out lobby you do not need to pass a public utilities oill—just get here Monday morning and do not adjourn until Friday, with a few evening sessions, and you'll kill the lobby, if that is what you want to do."
